Sliding Scale Pricing, Summer 2021

What is Sliding Scale? Sliding Scale is a pricing model that allows you to select your New Country Pride Camp tuition rate based on your family's net income and financial circumstances.

Why this model? One of our long-term goals is to increase financial accessibility to all of our programs as part of our commitment to equity. While we have traditionally invited all families to apply for financial aid, we want to take our pilot year of New Country Pride Camp to move toward a more trust-based format by allowing families to pick their tuition price. We are asking families with more financial means to pay more than the standard price, allowing families with less financial means to send their children to NCPC at a tuition rate that works with their personal financial experience.

How does pricing work? You will be able to choose from multiple tuition options (see image on next page). You will be able to pick any of the prices offered, no questions asked. We do ask that you consider your net household income before determining your tuition price.

How do I know what price to pick? We ask that you think about your personal financial experience and your family's financial means. New Country Pride Camp's standard weekly price is $1000- this is what it costs for us to run the program, including paying our staff, getting everyone to and from our campgrounds, providing high-quality programs, operating our pools/facilities, providing lunch and snacks, and more. If you are able to pay more than this price, you are helping families who have less financial means pay a price that works for their circumstances and helping us in creating a more equitable world.
